
Cleaning Up!

Posted by Bob French - 2008/08/03 11:09

Every time I have a party, my biggest problem is always on the cleaning aspect. How do you clean up during a party? I get so busy that I can't think of keeping the place tidy anymore. Do you, guys, usually hire help?

=====

Re:Cleaning Up!

Posted by Jaime Castleford - 2008/08/04 11:34

Yes, I get help, but just from my teenage neighbour. You don't need a professional butler to help clean up some dishes. But it's best to have someone around to keep things tidy.

=====

Re:Cleaning Up!

Posted by Kathryn Maitland - 2008/08/04 17:46

Bob, I have trained myself to scan the room where my guests are before walking to the kitchen to retrieve something. As I proceed, I pick up any empty glasses or plates. I then neatly stack them on a kitchen counter I have already designated for dirty dishes. It makes it easier to clean up after all have gone home. You do have train yourself!:laugh:

=====

Re:Cleaning Up!

Posted by Nathalie Watson - 2008/09/01 04:06

This has been so my biggest problem before, too, Bob! :laugh: But now, I have discovered a great strategy - I actually rent dishes, glasses and utensils for my party. That way, no one has to wash dirty dishes after the party. The rental company takes care of it. B)

=====